THE WORLD OF WOMEN

MEN STOP AND LOOK WHEN LADIES GLISTEN
Luminous Lame Will Do the Trick at Smart Parties This Winter

All the smart girls will shine at winter parties this year, and whether they adopt the gold or silver standard makes little difference in the gleaming success of their costumes. The luminous lame not only has taken over half of the dinner and formal dress territory, but has invaded the daytime field as well. Gay collars, cuffs, yokes and jackets of this material, added to plain little dresses of dark silk, give them a glamour they never before possessed.

Of the three costumes in the sketch, two are of almost tailored simplicity can turn feather-and-fur-draped rivals into overdressed frumps ready to retire in inches, a comfortable length for dancing.

The dull gold lame number in the centre is perfect for the crowded dance floor where to be ignored by the stage is to be ignored by the stage.

The tailored jacket of silver lame at the left tops a slightly trailing skirt of black velvet with line buttons and belt of the same fabric.

This is the sort of thing that can give you that just right feeling for any rendezvous. Its stark bit dramatic, straight in front, just touching the floor and trailing at the back for about six inches, a comfortable length for dancing.

The good old cork-popping spirit obviously inspired the costume at the right. It is simply a tinfoil-wrapped bottle of burgundy reversed. Burgundy velvet is used for the jacket and a shiny, silver lame for the pencil skirt. Wide ties of the lame removed, leaving the back bare, decorate the neck and elbow. If your young man seems to leer, put it back again. The skirt is a sleeves.

EXPORT OF GOLD TO BRITAIN

NET INFLUX TOTALS
£191,000,000

Bullion and specie figures issued by the Board of Trade for 1933 show total imports valued at £251,647,000, as compared with £152,176,000 in 1932.

Exports were only £60,312,000, compared with £134,319,000. The import surplus was over £191,000,000.

These figures reflect the big influx of foreign gold sent to London for safe custody. Gold valued at nearly £40,000,000 was received from France while only £9,500,000 was exported to France. Holland continued to have a gold import surplus, but this dwindled to one-sixteenth of the 1932 total.

The total gold movement to and from the United States almost balanced.

Imports from South Africa were approximately £69,000,000 and from India £34,000,000. The other Dominions and Germany contributed considerable amounts to the influx.

Of the net influx of £191,000,000, it is believed that about £105,000,000 represent the market value of gold acquired by the Bank of England. Of the remaining £86,000,000, part was acquired by the Exchange Equalisation Fund and the rest by private hoarding, almost exclusively by foreigners.

The total gold received from the Dominions amounted to £187,000,000 which is roughly equivalent to the amount acquired by the Bank of England and the Exchange Equalisation Fund, thus disposing of the charge that the authorities have withdrawn and withheld gold from foreign countries.—Reuter.

AT THE KING'S

YOUR CHILDREN.
Teaching Youngsters Generosity

By Olive Roberts Barton

How can we teach children to be generous? Can generosity be taught at all once a child has become utterly selfish?

Once a child has learned to think in terms of himself and himself alone, it is almost impossible to change his nature. We can teach him to give, but this is not real generosity. The real word implies pleasure in giving and the selfish adult will have himself to fight every time he donates a gift or an act on another.

The real secret of teaching generosity is to begin at beginnings.

catch him young and turn his thoughts away from himself.

There is a time, as those know who have worked with tiny children, just past babyhood when his developing nature wants to share his things with other people. We call it the generosity impulse but it may be something else. Whatever it is, it is the psychological moment in his life for us to seize upon and make the most of.

Age of Generosity

A little fellow of two will push his cracker into your mouth and say, "Bite!" Or he will bring his blocks and heap them into your lap. He moves over and pats the bed, "Lie down," he invites. It is the age of sharing. Perhaps in discovering his new relationship, "things" he wants a partnership, but at any rate he has his eyes off himself at the moment. And it is to be made much of.

Accept and praise him for his gesture. Encourage him to give not only you but other people his bites and his pillows and his toys. Don't let it bother you. Always accept and always be pleased.

It is when this stage is past, however, that children seem to divide into two types, the selfish and the thoughtful. If the former ceases to offer things to you or his playmates encourage him to do so, especially his brothers or sisters.

If the trouble has already begun and there is a scene every time you suggest his giving something away it is a good idea to try him through his likes rather than his dislikes. If Roy dislikes his neighbor Jack, it may set rather than dislodge selfishness. If he associates giving with something unpleasant there isn't much gained in the process.

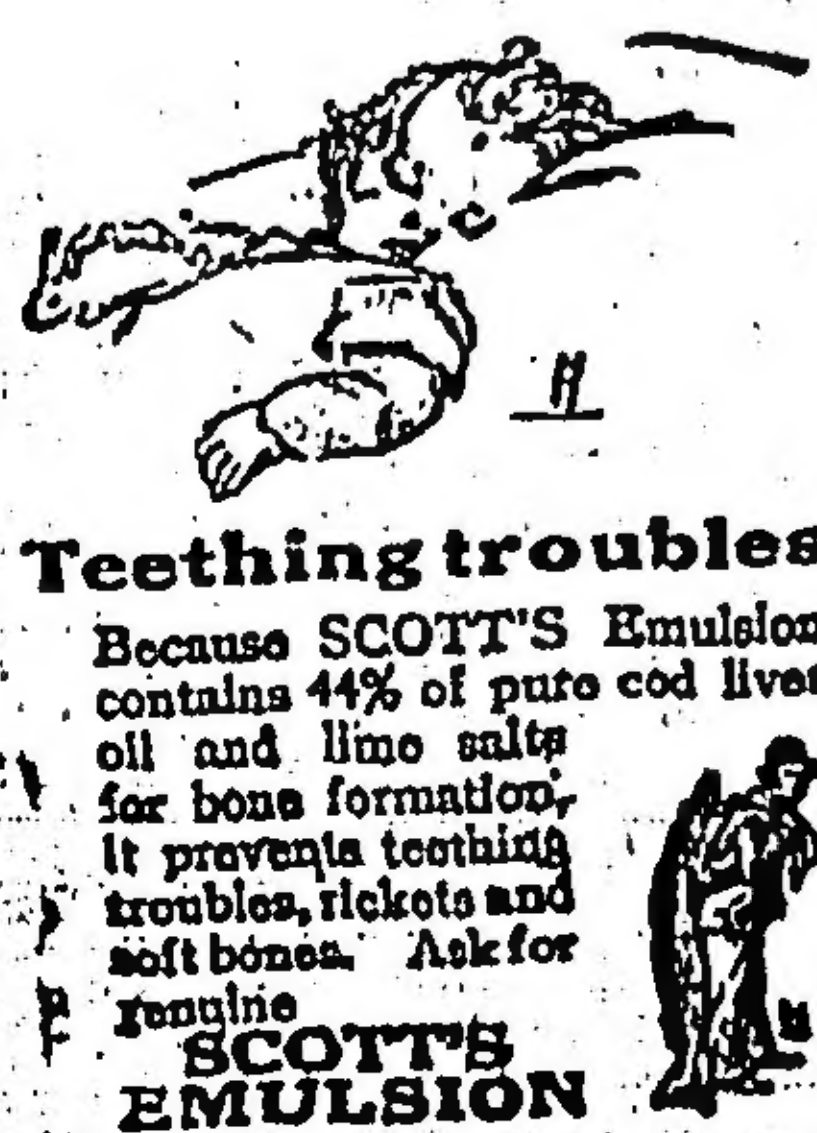

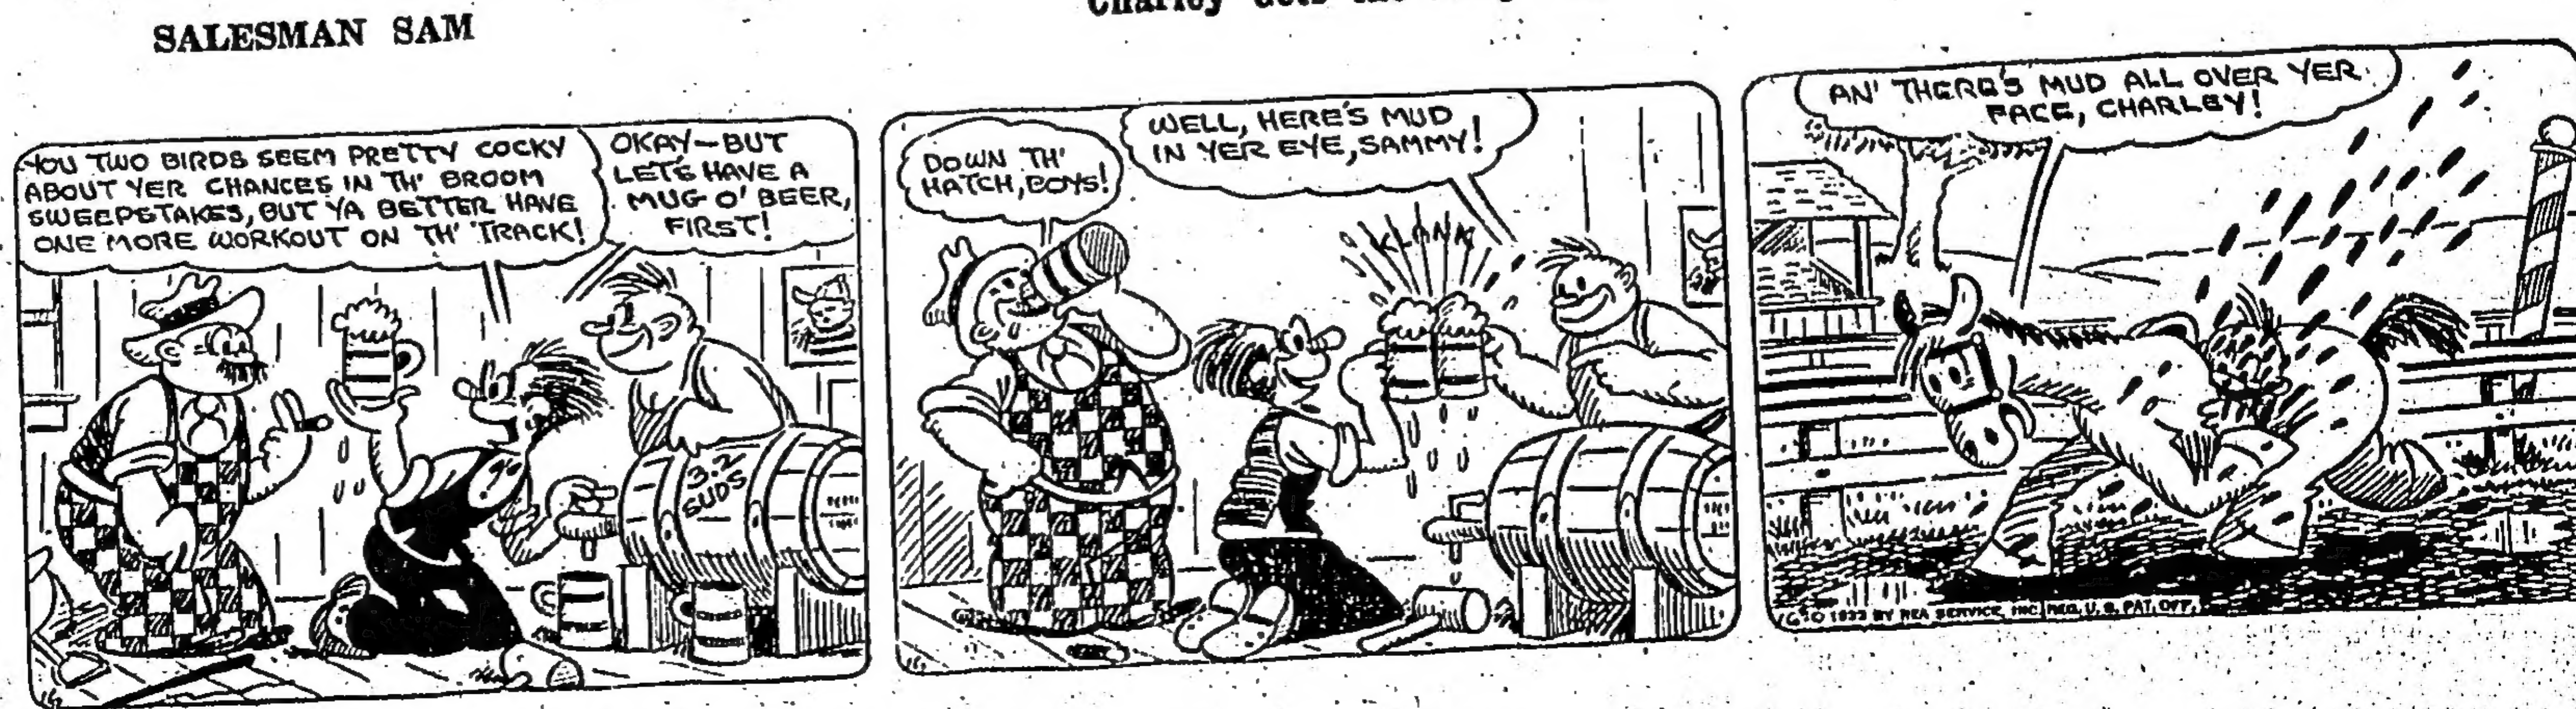

"Learning" to Give

Instead urge him to give Jane, whom he likes, his airplane to play with or his ball to hold, or half his apple. Then later try him on Jack again.

Perhaps he dislikes Jack and Jane and all children, or at least is jealous of them. Look around. What or whom does he like? The dog? His big wooden soldier? Then play a game. Have him give them things. That a dog is a dog and a wooden soldier senseless makes no difference to a child. He isn't looking too hard for appreciation.

Later if it is worked right, his "give" impulse may tactfully be directed to people, and still later, even to those he is jealous of. But unless it is rooted in him from the first this sense of having to give may prove his greatest conflict. Generosity, real generosity, must be bred in the bone.

CHAPTER XIII

Bannister hesitated an instant and then said, "Won't you come in?"

The man and woman entered the house. The woman was small, slender and young looking. She wore a long coat of black fur and a small black hat. Her features were attractive—dark eyes, below gracefully arched brows, a small nose and generous lips. Bannister noticed the darting glance with which she took in her surroundings before her eyes returned to the man beside her. There was a look of anxiety in those eyes.

The man was older, squarely built. His dark overcoat, the hat in his hand, everything about him looked expensive. He said brusquely, "My name's Stuart—Elbert Stuart—and this is my wife, Miss France here? They told us we'd find her here."

His voice was brusque and rather loud. There were footsteps in the living room and then Juliet France appeared, framed in the doorway.

"Juliet!" the woman cried, rushing forward. Their arms were around each other. Juliet France kissed the newcomer. She said, "Oh, Helen!" and then kissed her again.

Stuart spoke up, "I don't know if you realize what you've done, Juliet," he said sternly. "We've had a terrible time trying to find you. I don't know what could have possessed you! You should have thought of your parents—"

The girl raised her head quickly. "Do they know?" she demanded.

"Well, we've managed to keep it from them so far. But your sister's been nearly frantic. I don't know what could have made you do a thing like this!"

His wife turned. "Don't Elbert!" she said. "Don't scold her now." She held the girl more closely in her arms. "Oh, Juliet!" she exclaimed, "I'm so glad we've found you! I'm so glad to know you're all right!"

Bannister had been looking from one to the other, trying to make out what was happening. Suddenly Juliet France remembered him. She turned.

"This is my sister," she explained, "and her husband, Helen, this is Mr. Bannister. He and his aunt have been so wonderful to me. They've taken me into their home and done so much for me—"

Stuart stepped forward. "I'd like to have a talk with Mr. Bannister," he said. "Can you girls leave us alone for a little while?" Juliet looked at her sister. "We'll go upstairs," she said. Arm in arm, they went up the staircase.

"Come in here," Bannister invited, motioning toward the living room. He led the way and Elbert Stuart followed.

"No doubt," the newcomer began when he was seated, "I should explain this intrusion. On behalf of my wife's family I want to thank you for all you have done for Miss France."

"But I'm afraid I don't understand!"

Stuart waved this aside. "That's why I thought we should have this talk. My wife and I arrived in Tremont just a few hours ago. Our home is in Chicago. I'm a lawyer, Mr. Bannister. He added, confidentially, "McCook, Hartbridge and Stuart. We left Chicago last night after we'd read this—"

He fumbled in a pocket of his coat and drew out a crumpled newspaper clipping which he handed to Bannister. It was a vividly written account of Tremont's recent murder, with the part of Juliet France, the "mysterious, blond suspect" prominently featured.

"My wife and I were not sure," Stuart went on, "that the girl mentioned in that newspaper account was really Juliet until we arrived here. But Mrs. Stuart was worried and nothing would do but we must make the trip. He shook his head sadly, "This is a terrible thing!" he went on. "Terrible! I don't know what will happen if Juliet's parents ever find out about it!"

Bannister had been cycling him perplexedly. "How did you know that Miss France was here?" he asked.

"They told us at police headquarters. Your Chief—Henley, I believe the name is. We had a long talk with him. I satisfied him completely that Miss France could not possibly have had anything to do with the serious charges against her. I explained that her conduct was the result of a girlish prank and while that does not make it less reprehensible—"

Bannister interrupted. "Just who is Miss France?" he asked.

The other's eyebrows rose. "Don't you know?"

Bannister shook his head. "No," he said. "Miss France hasn't wanted to talk about herself and I didn't like to ask questions." "You took her into your home—a girl arrested on a murder charge—without knowing who she was? Elbert Stuart's gaze was incredulous.

"This is my aunt's home," Bannister reminded him. "I thought she'd be a good deal more comfortable here than where she was. And you still haven't told me who she is."

Stuart cleared his throat. "Miss France," he said, "is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. France of Evanston. The younger daughter. She's had every advantage a girl could have—expensive schools, travel, social advantages—but she's headstrong. Spoiled is what I call it. Allowed to have her own way too much of the time. I suppose that's how she became acquainted with this orchestra leader, Tracy King."

Bannister straightened but he did not speak.

"I don't know where she met him," Stuart went on, "but I don't think it could have been while she was at home. She's away often, visiting with friends. I understand King was good-looking, probably knew how to impress a foolish young girl. Anyhow," Stuart frowned as he continued, "Juliet had a flirtation with him. I didn't know anything about all this and my wife didn't know it at the time. If I'd known, I'd have put a stop to it. You can be sure of that!"

"Well, Juliet wrote some foolish love letters to this man. Of course her father is wealthy. A few weeks ago I guess she began to realize what a reckless thing she had done. Love's young dream had cooled off. Juliet asked King to return the letters and he told her he would—for a price!"

"That threat had its effect. I've told you Juliet was headstrong. She made up her mind to get the letters back without paying Tracy King a cent. She told her parents she was going to visit a friend in New York. Instead of that she came to Tremont. What happened here, you know. She went to King's apartment and demanded the letters. A few hours later the man was found dead.

"Juliet, naturally, was horrified at the thought of the scandal if the news should reach her home. She did an extraordinarily foolish thing and yet I can understand it. By refusing to tell who she was or where she had come from she brought suspicion on herself. At the same time she managed to keep her identity concealed. Of course it couldn't have gone much farther. She'd have been obliged to tell sooner or later. Chief Henley explained to us how you arranged to take her into your home. That was certainly generous—"

There was a rustling sound and both men glanced up. Kate Hewlett stood in the doorway. "Oh," she said, "I didn't know you had company, David."

Bannister was on his feet. "Come in, Aunt Kate," he said. "This is Mr. Stuart. Mr. Stuart—my aunt." He explained, "Mr. Stuart came to see Miss France. He's her brother-in-law."

Mrs. Hewlett smiled as she shook hands. "Then I'm awfully glad to know you," she said. "We've grown so fond of Juliet while she's been with us."

They heard footsteps on the stairs and a moment later Juliet and her sister appeared. Bannister noticed a likeness between the two, though Juliet was taller and their coloring opposite.

There were further introductions and Kate Hewlett said, beaming, "Of course you two will stay for dinner! I'll go put the plates on right away—"

Stuart raised a hand, objecting. "We couldn't think of putting you to so much trouble. Besides we want to catch an early train. Are your things ready, Juliet? If they are we'd better be starting."

The girl looked at him oddly. "What do you mean?" she asked.

"Why, haven't you packed? Then you'd better hurry. There's no time to waste. We can get a train in—"

"an hour and 20 minutes. It will get us in Chicago at 6:45 in the morning."

Something in the girl's face stopped him. He eyed her an instant, then went on sharply, "Don't you understand, Juliet? We're taking you home!"

Quite as firmly she answered, "Oh, no, you're not! I'm going to stay here."

YOUNG AUTHOR AND HIS PRIZE

MONEY FOR FLIGHT OVER SAHARA

Paris, Dec. 7.

The foremost important literary prizes for novels were distributed to-day. The prize which carries with it much the greatest prestige, of course, the Goncourt. Although the prize is only 5,000 francs, it is of much greater financial value as an advertisement. Only eight of the ten members of the "Academy" were present at the 39th annual dinner in the Restaurant Drouant—the other two having voted by letter.

A little after noon M. Roland Dorgelès, the youngest of the "jury," came out to tell the journalists—packed in the waiting-room like travellers on the Metro, during the rush hour—that the prize-winner was Andre Malraux for his last novel, "La Condition du Humain."

This book portrays Chinese revolutionary intellectuals and European capitalists in Shanghai.

Malraux, who is 32, told the journalists that the prize was indeed a matter of life and death to him since it would enable him to buy more petrol for his approaching flight over the uncharted area of Mauritania, between the High Atlas and the nominally Spanish territory of Ifni and Rio de Oro.

Incidentally Malraux's book was not among the hundred sent to the Goncourt Academicians by authors and publishers.

Malraux spent much of his childhood in French Indo-China, and learnt Chinese from his Cantonese nurse. His first book to be widely read was a study of Canton under Communist rule in the days when Borodin and Marshal Chiang Kai-shek were still allies.

He has spent many years in the Far East as far afield as Afghanistan and Mongolia, and has discovered a ruined city in the jungle of Indo-China. His next novel deals with Persia and petrol—the political and social problems of awakening Asia.

PRIX FEMINA.

The next most important prize, the Prix Femina, accorded by a jury of 21 women, was bestowed yesterday on Genevieve Fauconnier for a novel on childhood, "Claude." She is the sister of a Goncourt prizewinner of three years ago, the author of "Malaisie" (Malaya), and the wife of a Paris bookseller.

The two "consolation" prizes, the Interallie and the Theophraste Renaudot, went to Robert Bourgeois-Pallieron for his "L'Homme du Bresil," a novel of high finance, and to M. Charles Brabant for his long tale of country life in the Alsace district, "Le Roi Doré."

The decisions of the four juries are the signal for passionate literary discussion not only on the winners, but on the "also rans." The winning novels are rushed to booksellers by the publishers like grouse to the London poulterers on August 12.

HONGKONG AIR PORT OUTLOOK

Yesterday's Nanking message regarding the possibility of an agreement being soon concluded whereby China National Aviation Corporation's planes would be able to include Hongkong in their regular service suggests that some progress is being made in the negotiations towards that end. If so, and a mutually satisfactory arrangement can be reached, there will be general gratification felt. The Nanking message is a trifle cryptic, since it states that as soon as arrangements for permanent landing facilities are completed, Chinese planes will make regular calls here. The difficulty hitherto has not been in regard to landing facilities; it has been the failure to reach a reciprocal arrangement. Once a disposition is made evident by the Nanking authorities to conclude such an arrangement, the rest should be plain sailing. There would be distinct advantages to both sides if the obstacles could be overcome. Obviously, so far as the possible extension of the Imperial Airways to Hongkong is concerned, it would be far better if facilities could be given for planes to fly over Chinese territory from Indo-China than that the coastal route should be followed. Similarly, the Chinese Government must surely appreciate the immense advantages of being able to include Hongkong in its aviation services. Reciprocity in these matters is essential; nothing could be more shortsighted than a refusal to co-operate. Hongkong is willing to do its part, and it only now remains for China to evince a disposition to join in what should be a mutually advantageous arrangement. It is realised, of course, that if the Imperial Airways service is to be carried on to Hongkong, arrangements will have to be made with two other foreign countries as well as China. One of these is Siam and the other Indo-China. Conditions in the former country have been rather unsettled lately, but in view of the keen interest which is taken there in aviation development, no insuperable difficulty should be experienced in concluding an agreement. The French authorities in Indo-China would doubtless co-operate in granting reasonable facilities; no obstacles are expected in that quarter. Once working arrangements are devised with all the interested parties, Hongkong should come into the rightful place as a commercial air port which its geographical position justifies. It will be in the common interest for other centres to link up with this Colony, and thus have a share in the development of commercial aviation in this part of the world.

NOTES OF THE DAY

COIN PREMIUM

The annual problem created by a shortage of subsidiary coins of small denomination has cropped up again in rather severe form than usual and large importations are being made by Government to offset the high premiums established. Seasonal influences are largely to blame, though speculators have doubtless played an important part, hoping to reap a harvest at Chinese New Year when five cent pieces are such in great demand for good luck presents. The greatest share in withdrawing the coins from circulation is, however, the work of hoarders, seeking to outwit the speculators. Between them, the one seeking to squeeze and the other to avoid being squeezed, the community suffers.

FERRY SQUEEZE

The small coin premium is also the cause of another sort of squeeze alleged to go on at the ferries, where, it is said, change is refused to a coolee presenting a five-cent piece at any one of the barriers. The excuse advanced is the premium, which seems rather strange. One would imagine that the ferry collectors receive far more copper and small silver coins than they are ever likely to return in change.

SAFETY FIRST

One of the questions which will always be hotly disputed in connexion with Safety First campaigns of the type being organised in Hongkong is the responsibility of pedestrians for accidents of the road. No doubt exists that pedestrians are themselves solely to blame on many occasions for mishaps that overtake them, but there are also numbers of cases where people on pavements have been badly hurt, and where injuries have been caused by skidding vehicles. Safety First injunctions are equally necessary for both motorists and non-motorists.

AN ERROR RECTIFIED

France has agreed to restore the full quota on a wide range of British goods, having very little alternative. The issue of the decree ordering a cut of seventy-five per cent. was foolish in the first place. It was certain to rouse protests and to give the impression that it was issued out of pique following the pressure brought to bear on the surtax question. The French Government, too, appears to have forgotten the power in the Import Duties Act to add duties up to one hundred per cent. on the tariff against any country discriminating against British goods. Had British action been forced, the French wine and fruit trade with Britain would have been destroyed.

DOG-RACING 'G' LEGISLATION

The Home Secretary recently expressed a vague but pious hope that the Government would be able to do something this session about the Report of the Royal Commission on Betting. Long before there were reports put about that legislation would be presently introduced to bring back the totalisator for use on certain "approved" greyhound racing tracks. Any such legislation would be flatly contrary to the recommendation of the Interim Report of the Royal Commission published nearly a year ago and to the general intentions of the main Report which followed. But there is no doubt that such a reversal of judgment already delivered is what the greyhound-racing interests have been striving after, and, if the Government proposes to give them several more months in which to pursue that campaign, there is every reason for the influentially signed counterstroke which has been published and which has been sent to all members of Parliament.

AN INTERIM BILL

The signatories point out that the recommendations of the Royal Commission which have to do with greyhound-racing can be easily detached from the remaining wide field of the Commission's inquiries and put into force by an early Act. It is obvious from the signatures themselves that the widest public support would be available for such a Bill. Apart from confirming the position that totalisators are not legal on dog racing tracks its main function would be to secure that licences for other betting facilities on such tracks would have to be granted by the local authority and that they should not be so granted for more than a hundred days in any one year on any one track. If this subject was important enough to justify an Interim Report from the Royal Commission, it is certainly arguable that it is important enough to justify an Interim Bill.

MR. PEPYS IN HONGKONG

Jan. 6th.—Very early up and to my Office where I stay some time, ordering my papers. Later, after luncheon is taken, to the Happy Valley where I play at Krickett though I do feel I am not as young as I was. But Lord! the catches that he dropped he said to see. Later I do manage to see some of the Rugby Football, but I find the Navy too hard for the Clubbe who at forward are completely outdone and also at scrum half, where it seems the Navy Man do go as he plays unspoiled. Later back to the Krickett Clubbe where I find Mr. Tom and others who tell me of their match with the Indians which they win but not easily. So to the Clubbe where before dinner I drink a glass or two of Hollands waters and we fall to discussing the new quota of France touching imports from England, and we do all agree with Mr. Povy who says that France is most ungrateful, seeing that but for English aid she had been a vassal of Germany since 1914. And, says Creed, she is herein the most short-viewed as never again will England rescue her at the cost of war. Dined and played a game at billiards, but I doubt not I lack the practice to play the game well. And so to bed.

7th. Lord's Day.—Contrary to my habit, I did rise early this day and after trimming myself, set about the business of ordering my garments and acting them in the sunshine, for I am sadly in fear of the moths which ruins so much. Later I take a motor-wherry to the King's great shippe Suffolk. And upon the journey I do notice that this wherry carries not a pair of oars—which one did that I lately hired—and I am minded that it would be well that it should be the law, the more so that the engines of these boats do seem to be most unreliable at seasons. Being come on board the frigate, I take wine with my good friend Captain Sheffield of the Marines, he being due to sail upon the Tuesday for the south. And thence after much merry talk, to the Clubbe where I take my nuncheon and then walk over the hills to Lady Clement's Ride, which is now somewhat dilapidated. And above it I find a big new catchwater but have no leisure to pursue its course to the end. But I must do so. After I walk down the road to Deep Water Bay where I drink a glass of strong waters and watch those that play at Golf. And there I see many pretty ladies but none do wear shorts and so, as I suppose, they have taken to heart Mr. S. Doddwell's paternal animadversions. But, if they be slim, I am sorry for it—though I dare not say as much to my wife, poor wretch. Later home in Mr. Trams' motor coach and so to a very hot bath.

8th.—This day very stiff after my Krickett and walking and to the office where by dint of diligence I do order my papers by the time of nuncheon and then at the Clubbe I meet Mr. Muleygrubs who bids me eat at his home. So across the harbour and to his house where his Lady makes me welcome and so to nuncheon with much pleasant talk and after, watching a game at hockey, a thing I have not done these many months. And once more I do marvel at the speed of these Indians and their quickness of eye. Back to the Clubbe where over a glass of Hollands waters I meet Mr. Pitt and Mr. Cartops—busy and after to my Chamber where I fall to writing. And after dinner, I write in my diary, and so to bed.

"Why not ask the Benions over for bridge some evening? He knows how to fix furnaces."

BULLS AND INNERS

From the Office Butts

What about the following Safety-First slogan for Peak motorists during the foggy season? "More Haze Less Speed!"

We have been asked to define a vicious circle. A punctured spare tyre.

Quite a number of people who had a presentiment of what they were about to receive in the way of gifts, are now saying "That was not the present-I meant!"

Overheard in a local garage the other day. "What have you got in the shape of tyres?" "We very much wanted to suggest air-cushions, lifebelts, wreaths, doughnuts and fried whiting."

"Pork in Exchange for Whisky," says heading. Pigs' feet for hogs' heads!

Bayonne was so excited over the arrest of the Mayor that customers in a cafe smashed their glasses and forgot to pay for their drinks. Sounds a bit like Edward Kelly.

Reporting a motor car collision recently, a contemporary stated that one of the vehicles was "dam aged." Another impending apology.

Now that they've got real bear in America, it's more difficult to speak easy.

The speaker who declared that the world would never rest until it got rid of Communism, Socialism and Bolshevism might have added Rheumatism.

"I'm all in," as the big man said when he squeezed himself into his baby car.

Maybe Guy Fawkes was the only man who entered Parliament with the right idea!

"Footwear From Fish," says a heading. Probably soles and eels.

In a new play, a Scotsman has to invite an English tourist to have a drink. The prompter's services are much in demand.

An expert says a bad golfer is usually no good at billiards either. After replacing all the divots, he'd naturally be too scared to touch a cue.

Somebody wants to know which are the longest years in a girl's life. The ten between twenty and twenty-five!

"Hikers Fight," says a headline. Possibly to catch a bus.

Electrically-warmed drinks are being served at a modern restaurant. Watts yours?

When a jealous cat marries a gay dog, you can imagine what their married life is like.

A man often admits that he's a little stiff but never that he's a big one.

"Of all lovers of the open-air," says a health writer, "anglers are the most free from epidemics." Some, of course, never catch anything.

Women's evening shoes are now being made to represent flowers. Male dancers are requested to keep off the herbaceous borders.

We always understood the complaint to be not that married women kept men out of jobs but that they gave them too many.

Many a joke that comes to a suffering editor is too good to be new.

Sports Clothes to Celebrate the New Year

You're bound to have a proper spirit of gratitude when you array yourself in one of the charming new outfits

The sports wraps at the left are ideal for winter wear. The one on the far side is a modified sweater coat of natural dark muskrat, with a detachable ascot tie and puffed sleeves which give a youthful line. The nearer one is a loosely woven affair of diagonal brown and white tweed, with a smart collar of badger.

A HOSTESS gown of heavy black crepe with raglan sleeves of green and gold brocade is displayed on the seated figure above. It is in ankle length, with a modified cowl neckline which is rather low in front but quite high in back.

Standing, at the right, is a girl in a knitted tweed suit that's bound to make the other girls envious. It has a scarf tie of beaver, and the sleeves of the matching jacket are of the same fur.

COSTUMES COURTESY OF NELSON HICKSON
NEW YORK

A LOVELY DINNER gown of black velvet is shown at the left. It has raglan sleeves banded with sequin trimming which continues into a yoke at the back. The extra seams give a definitely slenderizing effect.

WINTER. Sports' costumes are things to make you truly thankful that you're alive to wear them.

When you've taken a look at all the winter shades which go to make up the latest wool frocks and sleek crepe models, you'll decide on something new to wear.

If you've been putting off getting a winter coat, why not get it now? If fur is to be your choice, look around for a nice muskrat. They come in all the darker, natural tones and also in that very new colour which is silver muskrat dyed gray.

If you can have only one winter coat, better get something that is classic in design. The modified sweater models are best.

Tweed coats are listed among the classics of wearing apparel. Those with beautiful badger, coon and beaver collars are right in the fore. Always glamorous, they seem to stamp the wearer as a very chic, well-groomed lady.

If you're giving a dinner in your own home a hostess gown is just what you need. And that's a practical idea, since you can wear it all winter for home entertaining.

Some of them are made of heavy crepe. Others are fashioned from soft velvets, brocades and ottomans.

Have long sleeves in your hostess frock. It's new to have them of contrasting material. For instance, you can have a black velvet dress with gold or silver lams sleeves.

Hostess gowns are usually ankle length. And many of them have high necklines.

If you need something new for the office or for street wear, consider knitted wear. There are hand-knitted suits as well as one-piece dresses with their matching jackets.

Knitted costumes make perfect the wardrobe for winter.

"MADE IN JAPAN": AN AMERICAN SURVEY

HOW PATTERNS ARE COPIED

By WILLIAM MILLER

American manufacturers are very concerned over Japanese competition, more especially at the copying of well-known trade marks. Here, in short, is what the Japanese are doing:

They buy a little something of what you make. After that, they make it themselves, using all your good ideas. Not satisfied with that, they try to sell it back to you.

Japan, like many other nations in these trying times, has made intense nationalism her religion. The West showed her the cards and forced her to play the game. She has determined to beat the West at its own game.

Year by year, since the war Japan has become more and more self-sufficient. Amazingly self-sufficient. At first she had to go West for the stuff out of which she was to fashion the new nation of progress.

GOES ON HER OWN.

Then, seeing how it was done, she started making it herself. She bought steel until she could copy the west's blast furnaces and Bessemer. Then she made them herself.

But to run them she had to have coal and ore, sulphur and silicon. Hence Manchuria.

Now she is in full swing. Many factors turn the cards in her favour. Compared to Western standards, her labour costs are insignificant. A few cents a day will buy roof and rice for the average workman.

In 1853 Commodore Perry took four men-of-war into Uraga Bay to open Japan to the world. Exactly 80 years later the new, industrial Japan is in full stride and is opening the world to Japan.

LABOUR FAR CHEAPER.

Cheaper labour, cheaper prices, enable the lusty young nation to meet the rest of the world on its own ground, and, despite terrific duty and imposts, often undersell it. Those three words, "Made in Japan," are becoming more and more familiar.

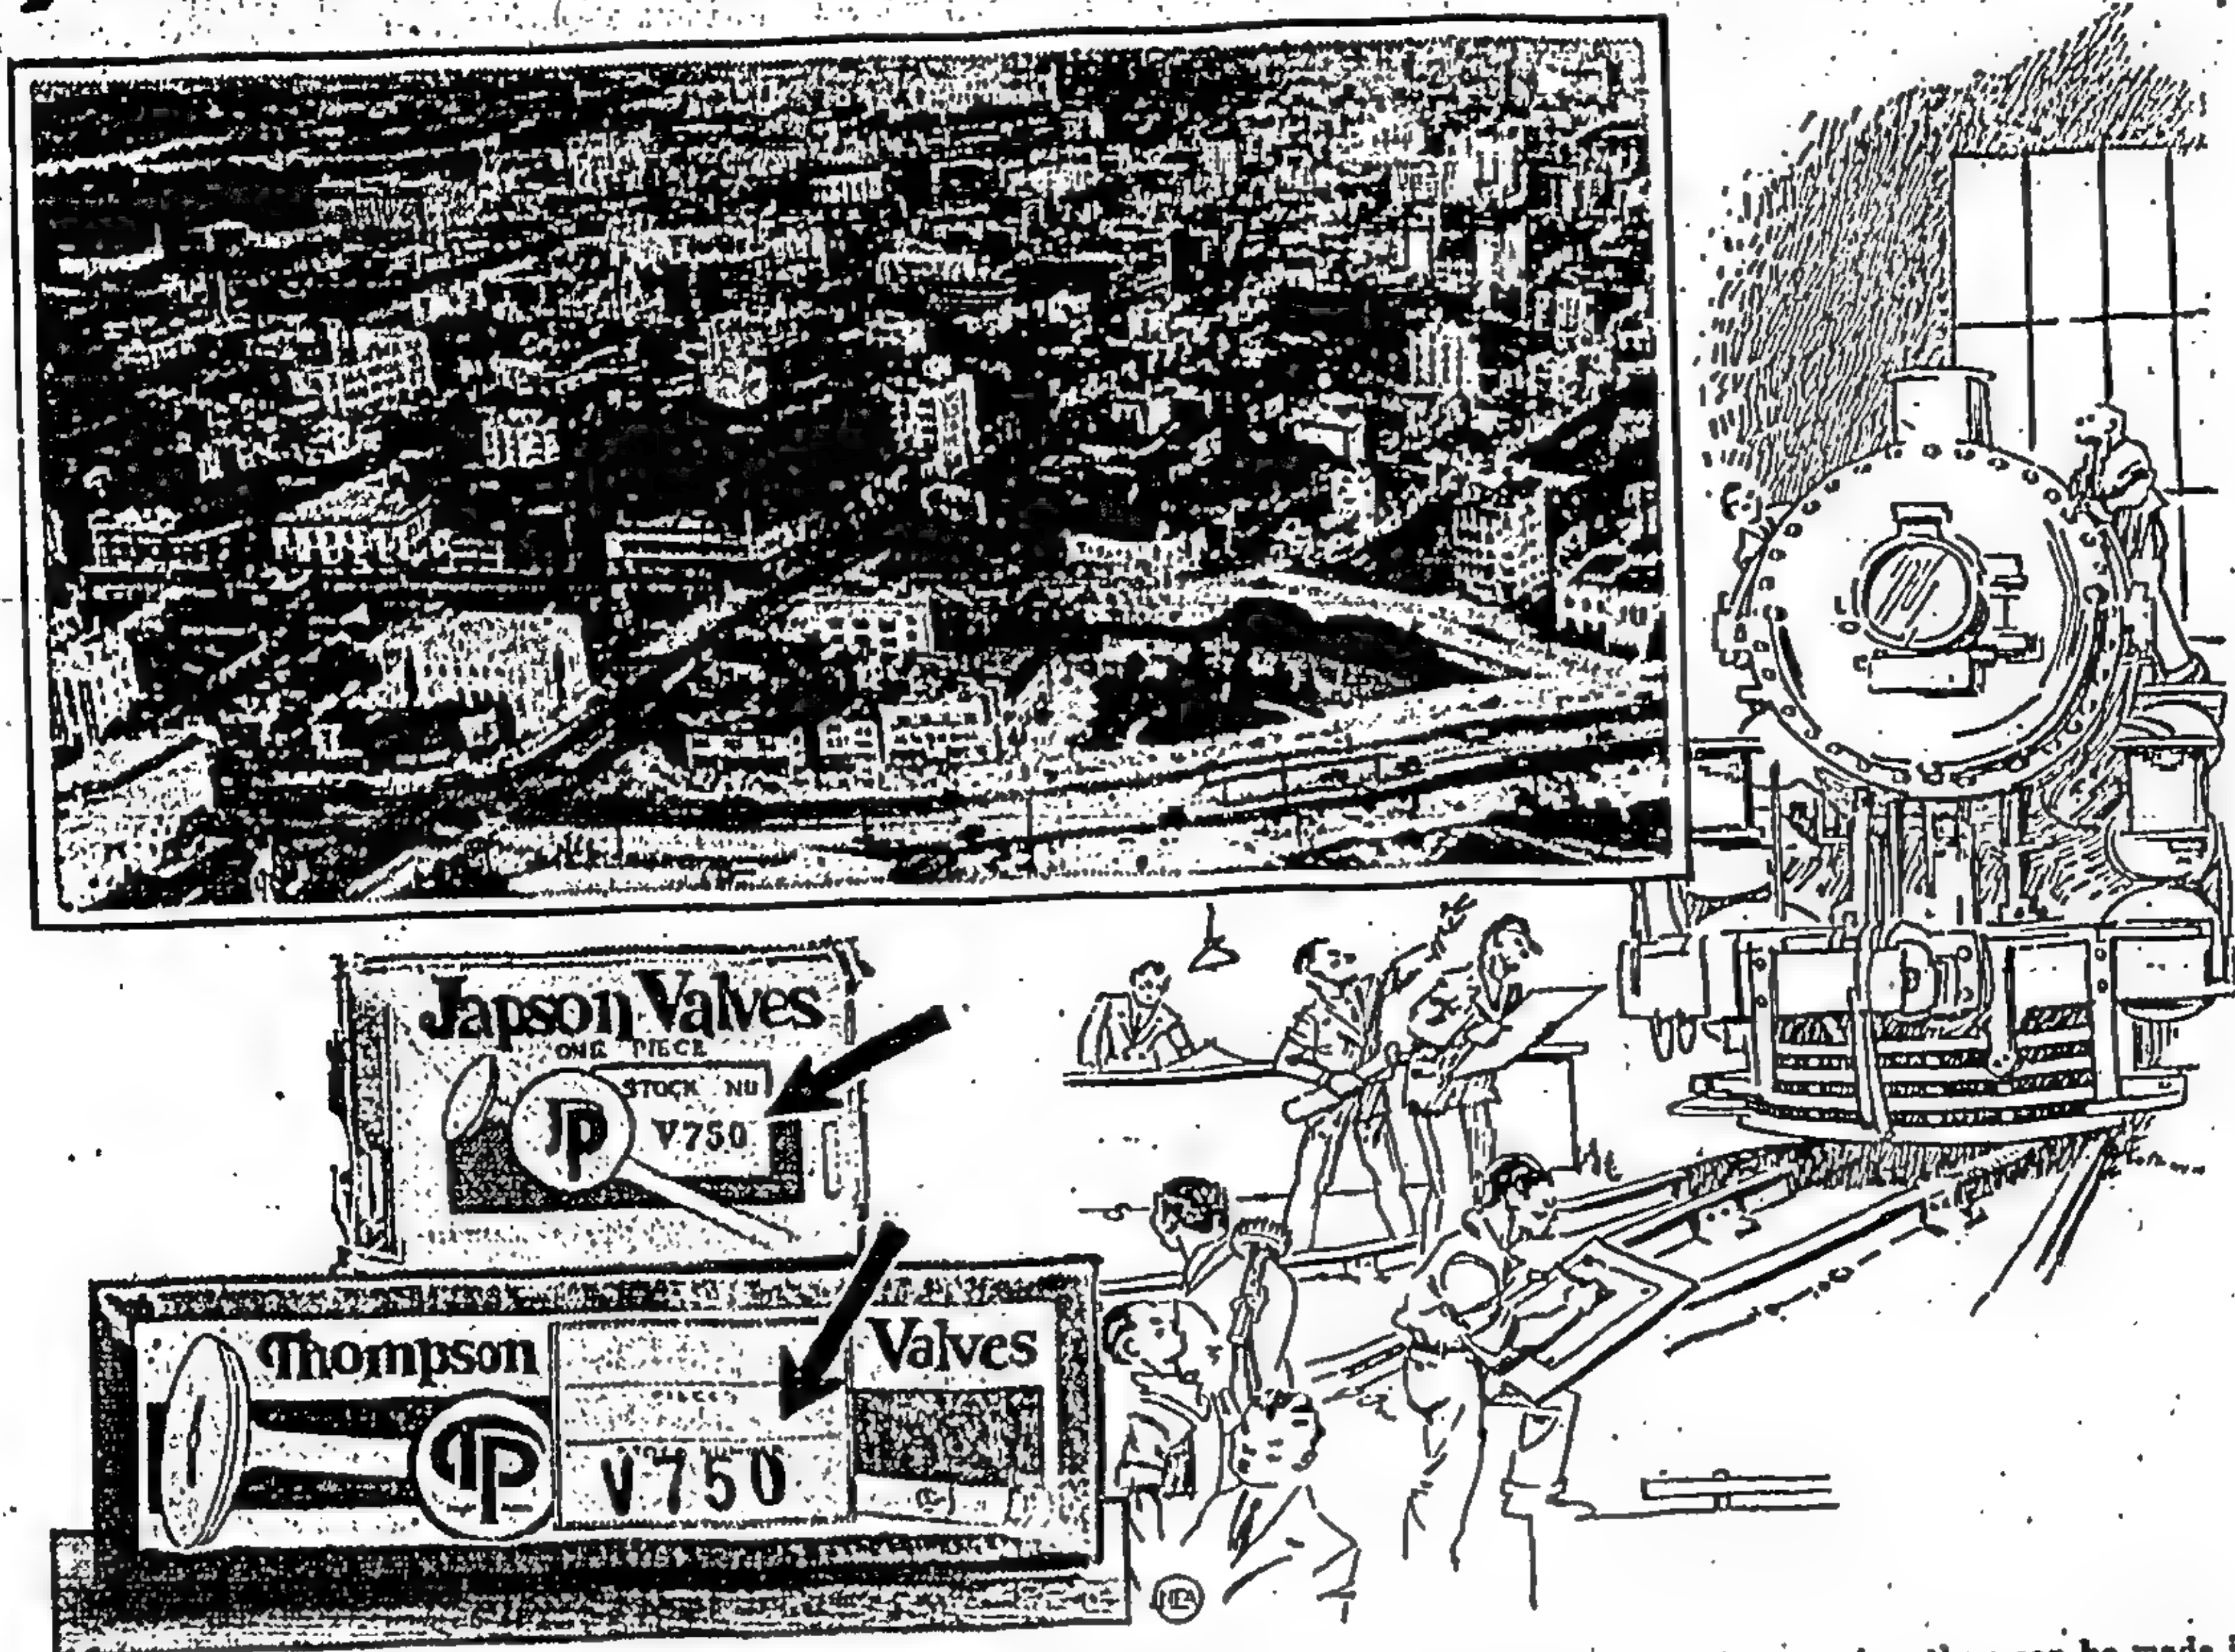

Which has led to some strange sights for American manufacturers.

Such as the locomotive manufacturer who read announcement of Japan's contract for locomotives.

His bid was low, because he threw in two or three extra locomotives, just for good will.

COPY U. S. LOCOMOTIVES.

But time passed and Japan didn't buy any more locomotives. She hadn't even used the ones she had bought. They never had moved out of the shops.

The Japanese buy American products, copy them, send their products back to America to sell cheaper than they can be made in the U. S. . . . They've copied American architecture in building the business area of Tokyo, shown at top. . . . They've copied the valves, shown at left, almost reproducing the trade mark and duplicating the stock number. . . . And they're copying every last rivet and pin on shown at left, almost reproducing the trade mark and duplicating the stock number. . . . They can make one just like it, at vastly less cost.

Instead, the Japanese had copied them, from largest wheel to smallest cotter-pin, including a few defects.

General Electric Co.'s light bulbs invade little foreign territory. But the corporation has been tried sorely by Japanese competition in its home territory.

More than a year ago a Japanese manufacturer exported some bulbs to America. On their tips, in a circle, were the letters: "T. E." They were in script and to the casual observer looked like General Electric familiar "G. E."

A suit now is being heard in Los Angeles against an importer who distributed Japanese bulbs which infringed General's patents.

SMOOTH COPY STUNT.

The recent discovery that Japanese bulbs were selling cheaper in America than they were in Japan led the Treasury Department to impose an extra tariff, equal to the difference, to prevent "dumping."

Thompson Products, Inc., of Cleveland, O., makes what it considers a rather nice automobile and aircraft valve. Foreign customers evidently thought so, too, because they bought them extensively.

Few of the foreign customers could read English. All they knew was Thompson valves and parts came in a yellow box with the symbol "T. P." on the side, the "T" and "P" intertwined. Now, it seems, the Japanese are making some valves, and replacement parts. They call them Japson valves. Curiously, they pack them in a yellow box.

Just as curiously, they have a symbol on the side, a "J" and a "P" intertwined. The "J" has a very short leg and a very long arm. The casual observer would have difficulty in telling whether it was meant for a "J" or a "T."

Even the valve stock number, "V-750," is reproduced. This, needless to say, is very annoying.

THIS DODGE FAILS.

An internationally known manufacturer of screens for various sorts of mining recently got an unusual order from Japan. They didn't want the complete screen, just the material.

The material was sent. The next order for more material said the order was contingent upon the firm enclosing its label for complete screens with the material.

The firm refused, saying the label was for the firm's screens, not for screens the Japanese might make with the firm's material. The order came back minus the stipulation and was filled.

Exceedingly large rubber animals, gaily coloured, you can pick up at the 10-cent stores for a quarter.

"How on earth," you wonder, "can the rubber companies afford to put so much rubber into a toy for so small a price?" Well, the answer is on the bottom of one of the rubber puppy's feet, in very small letters: "Made in Japan."

BOUGHT FOR MODELS.

A manufacturer of scale cars for blast furnaces sold three of them to Japan. He waited in vain for further orders. After a while he learned that Japan didn't need any more. The three she had bought were for models; now she's building her own.

American manufacturers do not question the right of Japan to become as self-sufficient as possible. They lived in too many glass houses themselves to cast stones at Japan.

But for all the patent and copyright infringement that has gone on within our own borders, they still feel that the Japanese have done things no self-respecting business man would condone.

TRADE IS RUINED.

This amazing self-sufficiency of Japan is one of several stones crushing almost out of existence American industries that formerly thrived in world trade.

Consider the example of a mid-western manufacturer of woollen cloths. Its export trade, which once ran into hundreds of thousands of dollars, has dwindled to practically nothing.

Met with Empire preferential tariffs, it cannot compete with British mills. Met with the suddenly developed Japanese competition on one hand and the high requirements of American labour on the other (higher still since NRA), it practically has been forced out of the world market.

LOSE EITHER WAY.

It has to get most of its raw material from Australia. But England, through Empire preference, gets wool from her little sister cheaper than can America.

Then we run into our own tariff walls on imports which boosts the price of wool even more. Well, out our tariffs. Then what happens?

Here come the Japanese! It is hard to keep Japanese woollens out as it is, because of Japan's low labour costs. They almost can pay the prohibitive tariff and still undersell the domestic manufacturer, as in the case of rubber dogs and electric light bulbs.

It is all a very perplexing business to the poor manufacturer. No matter which way he turns, they've got him.

"MILLIMETTERNICH"

THE STORY OF AUSTRIA'S DIMINUTIVE CHANCELLOR

DR. ENGELBERT DOLLFUSS

When Destiny sits down to deal out her high cards, she sometimes has a way of slipping them to people who never were expected to hold anything higher than an eight-spot.

Thus it is that a smiling, rather nervous little man named Engelbert Dollfuss—he's just under five feet tall and he weighs just a little less than 125 pounds, and he smokes cigarettes all the time—appears in Central Europe to-day, as the man of the hour.

Dollfuss is Chancellor of Austria, dictator of all that remains of the once proud Austrian empire.

To the north lies Germany, militant and aggressive under Hitler, openly scheming to swallow Austria's 6,600,000 inhabitants and make Austria just another province of an expanding Germany.

GREAT POWERS SUPPORT DOLLFUSS.

Chancellor Dollfuss stands in Germany's path. It won't happen if Dollfuss can help it; and while he is the tiny statesman of a tiny country, fate has dealt him a pretty fair collection of aces.

One ace is the fact that Italy, France and England have sided with him.

Another is the fact that he has succeeded in re-awakening the patriotic fervor of his fellow countrymen. A year or so ago most Austrians didn't especially care whether they merged with Germany or not; a lot of them, looking back on the dismal record of the post-war years, thought it probably would be a good thing. To-day they feel differently. The change has been Dollfuss' doing.

Still another ace is the little Chancellor's undoubted ability as a statesman and executive.

WINS HONOURS IN WORLD WAR.

What sort of man is he, this gamecock who has checked one of Hitler's prime ambitions?

He is of markedly humble birth. He was born in 1892, the son of a peasant woman, on a farm some 50 miles from Vienna.

In the old days of the Hapsburgs, a peasant's son had small chance of ever rising out of his class; but young Dollfuss showed such intellectual ability in the village school that he won a scholarship, went to the University of Vienna to study law, and passed from there to do post-graduate work in economics at Berlin University.

The war broke out when he was 22. He hurried home, enlisted, and served in a machine gun regiment in the Tyrol. He saw upward of three years of extremely active service, and on decorations.

Because of his bravery and intelligence, he was promoted to first lieutenant—a genuine distinction, considering the difficulties thrown in the way of a peasant's son in the old imperial Austrian army.

MAKES HIS MARK AS EXECUTIVE.

Then came the peace. Dollfuss went back to his home district and became an organizer for the farmers of the neighbourhood, who were forming a union to protect their economic interests.

His knowledge of law and economics, coupled with his native ability, made him a valuable man. After a few years he was appointed director of the Lower Austrian Chamber of Agriculture.

By 1920 Dollfuss had made his mark as a capable executive, and the government appointed him to reorganize and operate the national railway system. A year later he was made minister of agriculture in the national cabinet. Then, in the spring of 1932, came his greatest opportunity.

There was a cabinet crisis and a new Chancellor was needed. President Miklas selected Dollfuss.

For some months he did not make any very profound impression. Austrians nicknamed him, jovially, "Millimetternich," which comes to about the same thing as "half-pint Lincoln" in America.

TAKES OVER RULE OF AUSTRIA.

Then, last spring, came the crisis. Parliament dissolved and Dollfuss announced that he would rule alone.

Dollfuss is a Fascist. He disbelieves in parliamentary government. He has the typical Fascist conception of government organization. But he is not a Nazi.

Instead of joining hands with Hitler, his brother-Fascist, he massed troops along the border to keep Hitler's men in their place. Austrian Nazis were disarmed, their meeting places raided, their activities hampered.

He went to Rome, talked to Mussolini, obtained a loan to bolster his government finances. He went to Switzerland and got another loan. He won the consent of France, England and Italy to increase the size of the Austrian army. He revived his country's feeling of patriotism. He suppressed the Nazis, on one hand, and the Communists on the other.

LIVES QUIETLY, SCORNS "SOCIETY."

To-day you justly can apply that much-abused expression, "the man of the hour," to him. Austrians still call him "Millimetternich," but they say it admiringly now.

Dollfuss lives quietly and without display. With his wife and two small children he occupies an apartment not far from the Chancellery. Every morning, before going to work, he gets down on the floor to play with the children for half an hour or so—building houses out of blocks, helping them operate a toy train, lugging them around the room on his back, and so on.

He cares little for "society." His excess of nervous energy leads him to smoke constantly—more, it is said, than is good for him. And his favourite dish is a thick, creamy potato soup.

THE RETURN OF THE HAPSBURGS? STRING-PULLING BY THE EX-EMPRESS ZITA

BY MILTON BRONNER.

Otto Hapsburg, Archduke by courtesy, King by education, untiring aspirant to the shadow thrones of Austria and Hungary, celebrated his 21st birthday on November 20 with more genuine hope than at any period in his short existence. For time, circumstances and his mother have all been working in his favour.

Time has softened the war hatreds stirred up against the imperial Hapsburg family.

Circumstances now have made Austria a more fertile ground for royalistic manoeuvres than any time since the revolution of 1918.

His mother, the ex-Empress Zita, has been pulling the strings with "masterly" hand.

Zita will go down in history as one of the most striking figures of these times. Born a Bourbon-Parma, her grandfather, the Duke of Parma murdered and her father driven out when he was eleven, she grew up in the hard school of poverty and adversity, soared to dazzling heights for a brief time as Austrian Empress, and once more faces poverty and adversity.

PLANNING ROMANCE.

But there is a flame in the heart of this little, frail woman, with deep dark rings cut under her eyes, which will not let her rest. Twice she drove her exiled Emperor husband into attempts to get back his lost Hungarian throne.

She faced the danger with him. She shared his exile. Her husband dead, she dried her tears and began training her eldest son. To her he is ever and always a king. When he was 18, she summoned all the Hapsburgs to come to her Belgian home to pay tribute to their Kaiser and King, who had not realized his majority according to Hapsburg House laws.

Only recently she has been sojourning in Rome. Here, seated upon an improvised golden throne, she received Austrian and Hungarian legitimists. But she did more than that. She tried to engineer a marriage between her eldest boy and the pretty, dark, charming Princess Maria, daughter of Italy's king. It is rumoured that everything seems favourable. Little Maria will not have much say. Princesses are used to that.

Time has wrought some dazzling reverses. Only a couple of years ago, it seemed that, if Otto were ever to become a king, Hungary would be his best bet. Hungary called itself a kingdom, with Admiral Horthy as chair-warmer with the title of Regent. Hungarian custom, the laws called the Pragmatic Sanctions, and Otto's own descent seemed to make him King of Hungary although uncrowned. Austria seemed hopeless from his standpoint, because not only was it a republic, but in 1919 laws were passed taking away the Hapsburg estates and in 1921 other laws were passed barring Hapsburgs from being rulers of the little country.

But the year 1933 has seen the Hitlerites trying by savage methods to force Austria into becoming part of a Nazi Germany. Little Chancellor Dollfuss has proved himself the man of the hour in resisting this plan. France is violently against Austrian annexation to Germany, thereby aggrandizing that country. Italy is just as much opposed because Mussolini does not want Germany as his frontier neighbour. With these circumstances, the thoughts of statesmen are turning to the possibility of making Otto Emperor of Austria. That would, perhaps, scotch the Hitler schemes for good.

KING A "LESSER-ÉVIL"

Dollfuss is not violently opposed to a Hapsburg restoration with himself as Premier. His second in command, Major Fey, Vice Chancellor, is an ardent booster of Otto. But there are still many external and internal hurdles to be jumped. Inside Austria the Nazis and the Socialists at the two extremes are opposed to the monarchy. But it is not altogether improbable that the Socialists would take Otto as a lesser evil than a Hitler.

Externally the big powers are not so inimical as they used to be. But they might have trouble with the succession states—Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Roumania, which in the past have declared they would go to war rather than allow a Hapsburg to reign. They fear that Otto on the throne of Austria would be the first step. Crowning as king of Hungary would be the second. Attempt to grab back from them former crown lands would be the next. Hence their anxiety.

At his cradle the good fairies gave Otto many gifts—a quick receptive mind and good looks, which have made him the handsomest, most romantic-looking prince in the world. But the bad fairies gave him the cup of bitterness and tears to drink.

THE PRINCE'S ASSETS.

He was born at Wartholz Castle November 20, 1912. His father was then a simple Major in the Austrian army, only one of a shoal of Archdukes. The pistols which killed Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, in Sarajevo June 28, 1914, thereby bringing about the world war, suddenly shot the baby Otto's father into the position of heir apparent.

When he was four, the old man's death made Archduke Karl the new Emperor and Otto became Crown Prince.

From the palace windows his baby eyes saw the strong young men with flower-bedecked hats, going away to the war singing. From those same windows he saw some of them coming back, shell-blasted and silent.

ESCAPE TO SWITZERLAND.

In 1918, at the age of six, he saw Vienna in the throes of revolution. A short sojourn in a castle and then escape to Switzerland. The family moved from place to place. Then news that his father and mother had been captured when trying to get back the Hungarian throne and were being taken away as prisoners to an unknown destination. Then Maria where his father was an exile and ill.

March 27, 1922, in the night the ten-year-old boy was summoned to see his father receive the last sacraments. Four days later the child witnessed his parents' death agony. Once more the stricken family's dreary trek began. A castle at Bilbao, another at San Sebastian, a small house at Lequeitio, school days at the Benedictine Grammar School at Clairvaux in Luxembourg. Then move to Ham Castle at Steenock in Belgium, while he attended the University of Louvain and took the extended course in languages, literature, history and politics that a future king needs. Now he is ready for anything—even a throne. To get he is dedicating his life—pushed by the untiring Zita.

A serious fire broke out at Un Long, in the New Territories, early yesterday morning, when a block of three two-story buildings, occupied as shops and tenements, were burnt to the ground.

They found the block well alight on arrival, and it was not until late in the day that all danger was passed. A relief party of firemen took charge of the operations after the first had become exhausted.

CINEMA SCREENINGS*NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES*Dramatic story of present-day turbulent conditions in the U.S. wheat country interwoven with two romances. "Golden Harvest," Paramount's latest Charles R. Rogers production, scheduled as the next change at the Queen's Theatre. Leading roles are taken by Richard Arlen, Chester Morris, Genevieve Tobin, Roscoe Ates and Julio Hayden. It is the first of ten pictures which Mr. Rogers is to produce for Paramount this year. The story tells of the struggle of the American farmer to combat the ruinous influence of the trading pit. It is pictured through the eyes of two brothers, both born on the farm. The older becomes a wheat speculator with his eye on a fortune, who drives down the price of wheat, unthinking of its effect upon the farmer. When his former neighbours are ruined financially, facing the loss of their farms, his brother becomes their leader, organizes a widespread farm strike, prohibits the transportation of grain to the cities or the planting of a new crop. The picture reaches its climax when the brothers finally combine in a desperate effort to save the farmers using the strike as a threat to bolster prices. The human equation causes their financial failure but results in their eventual happiness.*"Samarang"

It is the opinion of biological experts that the motion pictures taken of a tiger shark and a giant octopus in mortal combat on the floor of the Indian Ocean during the film of "Samarang," which opens on Wednesday at the King's Theatre as a United Artists release, are the most unusual camera account of nature's monsters in battle now on record. Never before have two such enormous denizens of the deep been seen in combat by the human eye, and, in speaking of the battle after seeing it on the screen, Dr. Hazel Branch, biologist at Wichita University, gave some very interesting sidelights on the various fighting qualities and skill of the shark and octopus. Dr. Branch declared that because of the relative sizes of the two deep-sea monsters the fight was not evenly matched, and that the outcome of the fight depended more on the strategy used than on the fighting ability of either of the contestants.

"I'm No Angel"

"Strong sex-appeal" is the paramount consideration in a man's love for a woman, according to Mae West, leading S.A. exponent of the country, whose new Paramount picture, "I'm No Angel," commences its run to-day at the Queen's Theatre. In defining sex appeal she says it is the "radiation of an attractive personality" and not necessarily beauty of face and figure. Miss West furnishes a most arresting example of "strong sex appeal" in her new picture in which, attired in tights as Tira, the Circus Queen, who dominates men and lions, falls in love with a society clubman and unleashes a streak of typical Western wise-cracks that will reverberate in every corner of the country. Mae thinks that the girls of to-day have just as much sex-appeal as the women of twenty years ago—provided they remain feminine and stay clear of trousers and other mannish innovations. Miss West's newest picture was written by herself and has been directed by Wesley Ruggles. Her leading man is Cary Grant.

"To-day We Live"

The great anticipated co-starring vehicle for Joan Crawford and Gary Cooper, "To-day We Live" will be showing at the Oriental Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday as one of the major productions to come from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. In "To-day We Live" we have a story about the dramatic experiences of an English society girl who offers her services to England during the world War in an ambulance unit, and falls in love with an American flyer. Franchot Tone, Roscoe Karns, Louise Closser Hale, Rolfe Lloyd and Hilda Vaughn. In "To-day We Live" Miss Crawford finds herself the centre of an emotional conflict between three men, two of whom lose their lives in her behalf. The powerful story shifts from the aristocratic country estate of the heroine to dynamic episodes in the battle zones of the war, with what is said to be one of the most terrific climaxes ever devised for the screen occurring when one of the star's lovers gets a "death-order" to blow up a ship from which there will be no return. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is said to have placed all the facilities at its disposal to Director Hawks in the filming of this picture, which is reported to be one of the outstanding talkie productions of the year.

"Berkeley Square"

Leslie Howard, one of the most personable and most popular of all English actors on the American screen, believes sincerely that no player should make more than three pictures a year. Familarly walks on life, he affirms, "and the repeated sight of an actor's face tends to diminish his value and popularity." Howard is easily the most independent of all the players in Hollywood. He rejects tempting offers with a careless abandon that astounds the film folk. Recently he was offered a tremendous sum to play opposite a great feminine star and he refused point blank because he considered the role unsuitable to himself, but to the star he had been asked to support. He explained his attitude at a two length between scenes of Fox Film's "Berkeley Square" the Jesse L. Lasky production now playing at the King's Theatre. "In a sense I was protecting myself. After all, acting is my business. I must select my roles and my partners in this acting business as carefully as a manufacturer selects the raw stock that goes into his product. In both cases it is the fair thing to do, not only to ourselves but the public which pays for the finished goods."

UNEMPLOYMENT BURDEN

DISTRESSED AREAS PROTEST.

BILL'S EFFECT

Mr. W. Walker, Deputy Mayor of Manchester and Chairman of the Conference of Distressed Areas, has addressed to the London Morning Post the following statement on behalf of the distressed areas as to the financial incidence of the Government's new Unemployment Bill proposals. "It is difficult for us to deal, on the floor of the House, with any Minister who has at his disposal there all the resources of his Department in staff and material and there is no cross-examination to bring out all the evidence on which to form judgment. "The information at present before the House of Commons in justification of the Government proposals is:

(i) That if this Bill becomes law the State bears 95 per cent. and the ratepayers bear 5 per cent. of the cost of relieving able-bodied unemployment.

(ii) That the amount of relief to local authorities by this Bill is about £2,600,000 a year, and (iii) That the existing block grant is so weighted as to give special relief to distressed areas like Carmarthen County, of 14s. 10d. in the £ against an average of 4s. 9d. for all counties.

"On these grounds the Chancellor asks Parliament to say that justice is done to local authorities in general and that generous aid is given to distressed areas in particular.

CHANCELLOR'S FORMULA.

"On the first point—the 95 per cent. and 5 per cent. relationship—the Chancellor might well say that 'The local authorities have not sufficiently considered these figures.' We have not heard them before his speech in the House, and we have never thought that such a plea would ever have been formulated. The 95 per cent. is forthcoming out of a piece of arithmetic which puts down to the credit of the Government £51,000,000 per annum for 'Transitional Payments' and two or three millions to the rates. We can only leave it to the good sense of the House either to adopt or reject this theory. The greater the weakness of the National Scheme of Insurance against Unemployment and the more the number of insured men who cannot draw benefit out of Insurance Funds, the higher is the percentage that any Chancellor can calculate by this formula to belittle the burden on the rate-payers. Vice versa, when the Insurance Scheme is improved and less sums for transitional payments out of Exchequer Funds are needed, the percentage borne by local rates rises.

"As to the second claim we are being told that the Bill gives to local authorities a real gain of £2,600,000. We can only deal with England and Wales, where, on the best information available to the Treasury, £2,000,000 is the apparent advantage to the local rates, i.e., 40 per cent. relief on £5,000,000 for transferred cases. But these benefits are in lieu of about £500,000 of special grant now received by distressed areas. The local authorities are also to be liable to pay an extra 5 per cent. for cases transferred to the Government in the first instance, and afterwards thrown back on local rates. This involves £150,000. The provision of juvenile instruction centres is estimated by the Treasury to put another £250,000 per annum on to local rates. In the net result the gain by this Bill in England and Wales is just over £1,000,000 in aid of local rates—shared by rich and poor towns in the same proportion. We cannot regard this as reasonable, for we are still left with heavy debts for relief work and intolerable rates for public assistance.

THE BLOCK GRANT.

"On the last point, namely, the virtues of the block grant in aid of distressed areas, we cannot think that the Chancellor can have made his statement with all the facts before him. Counties like

FORBIDDING FORM OF BIBLE

CANON DEARMER'S CRITICISM

No book is so badly printed as the Bible. This is the view of Dr. Dearmer, Canon of Westminster Abbey, in the first of two lectures on "The Bible as Poetry," at the Abbey.

Forty years ago, said Dr. Dearmer, a great scholar had drawn attention to "the forbidding form" in which the Bible was given us. It was like binding up Tennyson, Bunyan, Macaulay, and Shakespeare in one volume, with the titles of all the poems and essays cut out, and the names of speakers and divisions of speeches removed, as well as quotation marks.

The whole was then divided up into chapters, which sometimes cut right across the meaning, and subdivided into sentences of a convenient length for parsing.

It was not surprising that the glorious poetry of the Bible was unknown to the majority of people.

UNEMPLOYMENT BURDEN

Carmarthen and Cumberland receive block grants worth 14s. 10d. and 11s. 8d. in the £ respectively, not because of the weighting for unemployment, but because they save to be recouped for heavy losses by derating of agricultural lands and other derated properties. We invite the Chancellor to inform the House how much of Carmarthen's 14s. 10d. is due to derating refund, and how much to the unemployment factor in the block grant formula, which is the vital point. The correct figures might cause him concern and maybe he would wish to qualify his statement to the House.

"Accepting the Chancellor's claims as they stand, the rate in the £ for out-relief alone in Merthyr Tydfil, with all the benefits of this Bill, will be about 5s. 6d. in the £, and in Oxford will be less than one penny. Places like Barnsley, Gateshead, Lincoln, Liverpool, and Sheffield will have to levy rates for the same purposes of two to three shillings in the £, while Blackpool, Bournemouth, Exeter, and Hastings will need only two or three pence.

SUICIDE PROVES AN ERROR

"NOW DOCTORS WILL FIND OUT"

William Maffia, aged 35, who worried because a doctor could find nothing wrong with him, gassed himself at his home at Railway-place, Bethnal Green.

Samuel Maffia, a brother, stated at the inquest at Stepney, that a specialist who examined William told him he could find nothing wrong with him.

"My brother kept on saying he was sure there was something wrong with his stomach, and he was always in pain," he added.

In a note to his mother, Maffia said, "Now the doctors will find out what is wrong with my stomach."

Dr. A. Piney, pathologist, said that Maffia had an ulcer in the stomach.

Recording a verdict of suicide while of unsound mind, the Coroner (Dr. R. L. Guthrie) said, "There is no doubt that his condition would cause him a great deal of pain."

KENT LOSE WALLY HARDINGE

GREAT BATSMAN RETIRES

VALUED SERVICES RECOGNISED

VOTED £500

Wally Hardinge, for many years Kent's opening batsman, has played his last game for Kent. His engagement has been terminated. This decision was reached recently by the Committee of the Kent Club, who informed Hardinge that they had voted him £500 in further acknowledgment of his services, and in the way of a parting gift.

Hardinge, who is in his 48th year, is one of the select few who has won international caps both at cricket and football.

He played for England at football in 1910 and at cricket in 1921.

He was born at Greenwich a district from which both Freeman and Ashdown hail.

Hardinge made his debut in the Kent eleven in 1902, when he was 16. Bowling was his forte; the same slow left arm stuff with the deceptive flight and cunning spin which so often caused panic among opposing batsmen in later years.

It was not until 1907, however, that he played regularly for the county.

That year he registered his first century. In the next season he scored 1,341 runs, but in 1909 he fell away.

The following year, however, saw a complete return to form, and since then he never looked back.

In his long career he has scored over 24,000 runs in first class cricket, including about 64 centuries.

His highest individual score is 240 not out, made at Leicester in 1923.

Four times he has registered two individual centuries in a match.

As an outfielder, Hardinge was without a superior.

As a footballer he played for Maidstone before donning the colours of Newcastle United, Sheffield United and the Arsenal.

Some years ago he was granted a benefit which realised £1,600. An application for a second benefit did not succeed.

Both Wright and Seymour, it will be recalled, were voted £500 on their retirement.

NURSERY CHANGES.

Neither Blunden, the young fast bowler, nor Bateman, who joined the staff at the Nursery last summer, in this capacity, had charge of the Cup Finals of 1900 and 1901, when Bury and Southampton and Tottenham Hotspur and Sheffield United were the respective opponents. Thirty years later his son, A. H. Kingscott, refereed the Cup Final between West Bromwich Albion and Birmingham.

A Derbyshire man, Mr. Kingscott lives at Sawley, near Long Eaton.

F. A. SENSATION

RESIGNATION OF TREASURER DEMANDED BY COUNCIL

ALLEGED INDISCRETION OVER LAST YEAR'S CUP FINAL

The Football Association Council recently asked Mr. A. Kingscott to resign his office as Hon. Treasurer of the Association.

This decision was taken following the consideration of a report from a special committee which had investigated a complaint made by the Association of Football League Referees and Linemen. The terms of the resolution adopted by the Council were:

That in the best interests of the Football Association, Mr. A. Kingscott should resign his office as hon. treasurer of the Association; failing which his name be and is hereby removed from all committee and sub-committees of which he is now a member, and that he be suspended from his office as hon. treasurer of the Association.

The complaint arose out of an incident immediately prior to last season's F.A. Cup Final. It is the custom for the referee of this game to choose the ball that is used. Mr. E. Wood was the referee last April, and it is alleged that Mr. Kingscott denied him the right to select the ball by selecting it himself; also that in doing so, he made an observation reflecting upon the integrity of referees previously in charge of these big matches.

STRONG PROTEST.

In a statement issued immediately after the F.A. Council meeting Mr. Kingscott emphatically protested against the "cruel and unjust charges" levelled against him, and declared that his action regarding the selection of a ball was carried out under pressure from a prominent official of the Association.

"I never heard that anything was wrong or that any exception and been taken to my action until after a lapse of six months," he states. "Then, I was called upon to explain my action. I told the Commission that I could not and did not make the remarks attributed to me, and I did not have the slightest intention of impugning the integrity of the referee (Mr. Wood) and I naturally thought that, after my letter to the Secretary, nothing more would be heard of the matter."

"When the President asked for the appointment of a Commission, I simply staggered, but on reflection I thought myself and that when I had made my statement there would be nothing more to be said. Then, I did not think it necessary to ask any questions."

"Both Mr. Wood and myself were then asked to leave the room, and our absence the Commission considered the matter."

"I WAS STAGGERED." "When I was asked into the room again, I was staggered and astounded to be told that the findings of the Commission were that I had used the words complained of and that I should withdraw them. I replied: 'You have asked me to withdraw something I have never said.'"

SEVEN GOALS ON THE DOCKYARD GROUND

Oswald Forwards in Form Against Osiris

Playing on the Dockyard ground yesterday afternoon, Oswald defeated the Osiris in a friendly football match by 5 goals to two. Oswald led at the interval by two goals to nil, Simmonds and Gonnal being the marksmen.

Five more goals were scored after the interval, Morris and Simmonds netting for the Oswald, and Lt. Donald and Wilson for the Osiris.

It would be difficult to single out any one player as being especially prominent and Oswald were value for their victory, although the score rather flattered them.

The teams under Leading Seaman Bolt were as follows: H.M.S. Osiris: Willey; Crowley; Stenton; Farmer; Arms; Kirkham; Lt. Donald; Wilson; Colwell; Haddleton. H.M.S. Oswald: Marrett; Neill; Ford; Walder; Williams; Hinder; Blewitt; Morris; Gonnall; Palmer; Simmonds.

FRIENDLY CRICKET

Hongkong C.C. Hosts To Civil Service

The Hongkong C.C. will be the hosts to the Civil Service C.C. in a friendly cricket match this afternoon commencing at 2 p.m. The following will represent the Hongkong C.C.: A. C. Beck, G. S. Dunkley, D. S. Harley, A. W. Hayward (Capt.), L. D. Kilbey, J. McInnes, E. J. R. Mitchell, E. Owen Hughes, T. A. Pearce, T. E. Pearce, and T. M. L. Redmond.

BUSINESS TIES FORBID

Allen's Leg Wound Develops into Serious Injury

Pardoe Also on Sick List: Interport Selectors May Face Dilemma

TO-DAY'S BIG LEAGUE MATCH

(By "Veritas").

INTERPORT ITEM NO. 1—Latest reports have it that Albert Howe, Club centre-forward, and the man who obtained the winning goal for Hongkong in Shanghai last year, will not be available for the trip North next month. Howe has been in the running for the forward line leadership, having appeared in the recent trials, though without any success.

Albert Howe, the Club Centre-forward, and a leading nominee for this position in the Interport team, is, according to latest reports, unable to go to Shanghai if selected.

INTERPORT ITEM NO. 2—I learn with great regret that Allen, the Royal Artillery right back, who is as certain as anybody can be certain of finding a place in the team, is now in hospital with a bad leg injury. Allen was severely wounded in a recent match, and there appears to be some danger of inflammation setting in. He will certainly not be playing for Artillery this week-end. All will join me in wishing him a speedy recovery.

INTERPORT ITEM NO. 3—Another player on the injured list is Pardoe, R.A. captain and centre-half, who has been under the selectors' eyes for the pivotal position. Pardoe is, I believe, a non-starter this week, and his prospects of going to Shanghai for a second time may be affected.

PARDOE.

AND THEY DO TELL ME—

THAT the Club are experimenting this afternoon against the Recreio.

THAT Dominy has been sent to right half.

THAT Hill has been reinstated at inside right, Desmond Hynes at right back, and Skinner once again centre-half.

THAT George Rodger is a non-starter, and that Lawson will operate between the sticks.

THAT the Borderers will have a full team out against the Lincolns.

THAT the Lincolns will do likewise against the Borderers, excepting, of course, Heath and Ash, who have now been out of the team for some weeks.

THAT although Underwood played a splendid game in the Senior Shield against the East Lanes, the 24th have preferred Jones, now hot-foot after Interport honours.

THAT the last time the Borderers and Lincolns met, the Welshmen

Mullane and Jones, who are expected to play against the Lincolns this afternoon, although injured last week.

had Jones at inside left and Underwood at left half.

THAT Jones, then famous among his supporters as "Ooker" had begun to deteriorate as an inside forward.

THAT "It's an ill wind"—and that Underwood's unfortunate suspension provided Jones with the opportunity of showing what an efficient half-back he can be.

THAT it was not until November 18 last the "Swobs" discovered their best forward line, now constituted by Mathias, Harris, Fortey, Hazlewood and Duncan.

THAT earlier in the season, Harris had been tried on the right wing, with Hazlewood as his partner, and subsequently Nelson at inside right with Hazlewood centre-forward and Jones inside left.

THAT neither Pardoe nor Allen will appear for the Royal Artillery against the Police in the Senior Shield to-day, or against South China in the League to-morrow.

THAT this has completely ruined their chances of winning either match.

THAT Timberlake and Lewis have been lost to Kowloon for several weeks, H.M.S. Wren having sailed for Singapore.

THAT it is possible McKelvie, the "veteran" may be called in to do service against the East Lanes to-day, but that at the time of writing the Kowloon line-up has not been made known.

FIVE MINUTES FOOTBALL:

METHODS OF THE AUSTRIANS

(By "Saracen").

Although we may have little to learn from the Austrians in a tactical sense, they have introduced new ideas and they are an interesting study. First of all the attack. It has been stated that the forwards all go up in line, but this is not strictly accurate, as the centre-forward stations himself about half a dozen yards behind the others. In this respect he plays in a very different style from the British centre-forward who acts as a sort of spearhead to the attack and lies just as far in front of his colleagues.

The Austrian forwards too operate in the old method of wings, one moving independently of the other at least until the goal area is reached. It is very seldom that a cross pass is made; the inside right, for example, does not bring the outside left into the game.

It is notable too that they do not practice the centre. When a wing man has the ball when the penalty area is reached he often moves inside to make a slightly backward ground pass to the centre and this in my opinion is where the attack, which up to this point has been so good, begins to go wrong.

PENALTY AREA CONGESTION.

By his backward pass the advance is halted and when it starts again it is not by putting the ball through for a man to run on to it to shoot. The passing becomes square and it is never easily stopped. At the same time the defenders have been allowed to take up strong evening positions and with the forwards all gathered together there is an unfortunate congestion in the penalty area, I believe, however, that the Arsenal proved to the Austrians the error of their ways and the next time they pay us a visit I expect to see that they have changed their methods.

Another unusual feature of their formation is the position of the centre-half. He follows closely in the wake of the centre-forward. On the other hand the wing halves lie further in the rear and wide, cut marking the opposing outside forwards. This again is directly opposite to the British plan in which the centre-half operates mainly as a third back and the wing halves advance in support of the forwards.

Further the Austrian backs go up further than most British backs. Indeed the three lines are closely linked and there is a tightness in the defence which is admirable. But their football is, I am afraid, designed chiefly

IMPROVE YOUR BILLIARDS

HOW TO USE THE LONG REST

SECRET REVEALED BY W. SMITH

In all my reading of Billiards books I have never seen an article giving instructions on the use of the long rest. Is that not strange? And yet it is an implement which the amateur uses usually in the most awkward manner—if he uses it at all. But the majority of amateurs will generally play any old sort of stroke rather than use the long rest.

Some do this to avoid the trouble of lifting it from the side of the table or carrying it from the cue rack. Others avoid using it because they feel so helpless with the long cue in their hands. But most avoid it because they are conscious they make such an unholly mess of a stroke that calls for the use of the telegraph pole!

Now this trouble is easily got over. It arises simply because the player is unable to get the right focus—that is in the correct distance from the ball when aiming for the stroke.

No doubt many of you may have seen a player put his hand in front of the ball and say to his opponent with the long rest, "Right," thus giving him the correct distance from the cue ball. That is all very well in a friendly game, when an opponent is sporty enough to give assistance. But in a handicap or a league game such assistance is not allowed. It is, therefore, the duty of every amateur to equip himself with that he is able to distance with assistance of that kind on all occasions.

HOW IT IS DONE.

I slide the long cue tip along the cloth to ascertain when the cue is near the ball. By this little move it is perfectly easy to get the right distance. Acting in this way the amateur avoids the danger of sending the cue too far forward and fouling the ball; or (what is worse) keeping the ball and making a "stop shot" as a result of short cue delivery. The follow through with the cue in such a case is non-existent because the focus is faulty. The cue practically finishes its forward movement when contact is made with the ball.

Try my method. After a few attempts you will find it easy to gauge the correct distance from the cue ball before delivery. Above all things, see that you hold the rest firmly on the table with the left hand. No shot can be made correctly with the rest if absolute steadiness is not there. Especially in shots with powerful screw or forcing strokes.

When you learn to use the long rest many breaks which would have ended abruptly in the past will be carried on to higher figures in the future. The long rest is a simple instrument to use when one knows how to use it. Its terror, like the terrors of superstition, depart with increasing knowledge.

to produce spectacular effects. From a practicable point of view it would not satisfy the British public.

To-day's Rugby Football

LOCAL XV TO MEET ARMY: HOME-SIDE PROGRAMME

The following will represent the Hongkong Football Club Rugby XV in the second round of the Triangular Tournament against the Army on the Club Ground at 4.00 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 13.—J. P. Whitham, J. J. Ferguson, W. H. B. Rigg, R. H. Griffiths, G. P. Lammert, M. W. Turner, H. C. Mecke, I. H. Bradford, R. G. Castleton, A. F. Walkden, W. E. Peers, D. A. Cumming, D. McLellan, G. C. Moutrie, R. O. K. King. Referee: Lieut. D. Lampen, R. N.

The team to represent the Colony against the Australian Universities will be selected after this game.

The Army beat the Club by 6 points to 3 in their first round engagement and the latter will be out to turn the tables.

One county championship match in the Midland Group is to be played in the English rugby union this afternoon, but as the titles have all been decided little interest attaches to the fixture.

The programme for this afternoon is as follows:

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

Notts, Lincs, & Derby v Leicestershire (At Lincoln).

CLUB FIXTURES.

Bath v Northampton. Birkenhead v Guy's Hosp. Bristol v The Army. Devonport v Neath. Gloucester v Newport.

CANTON UNFORTUNATE

Depleted Tennis Team to Meet the K.C.C.

Word was received this morning that the Shamen Tennis Club, who are sending a team to meet the K.C.C. here to-morrow will be unable to turn out six players as originally arranged.

Neither Frank Read nor Hanford can get down, and in consequence the programme has been restricted to four singles and two doubles.

Burnett is also unable to play for the K.C.C., and the teams will therefore be:

Shamen:—R. P. Nowell, C. E. Watson, Dr. Procht, and Surber. K.C.C.:—S. A. Gray, C. A. Wright, R. B. Hambly and D. S. Green.

LINCOLNS GOING TO MACAO

By "Bully Off"

I have dealt with the trial matches held for the purpose of selecting a representative local Ladies XI to meet the Australian Ladies XI in a number of previous articles, and to-day I propose to run through the selected team, giving a brief summary on each player.

R. ROSE (St. Andrew's). The best lady custodian in the Colony. In the past she has been a tower of strength in the St. Andrew's defence. Is very steady and keeps cool under pressure and has good anticipation.

E. M. GRAY (H.K. Ladies). A reliable and hard-working right back. During the recent trials has been consistently good. She could, however, improve the strength of her clearances.

A. FOWLER (Y.M.C.A.). Perhaps the hardest hitter among the ladies. Inclined to be erratic but should improve with a little more concentration.

M. K. LOWE (H.K. Ladies). A very good choice for the right half position. Knows how to use her stick and to tackle. Keeps her forwards fed with good passes.

J. WONG (St. Andrew's). A real find for the centre-half position. She is very young and has only had one season of competitive hockey. Played well in all the trials.

The Macao hockey team which has enjoyed such a successful season, photographed before their match with the Midway Officers last week. Reading from left to right the players are: Back row—F. Rodrigues, M. Lacerda, Almeida, Lino Ferreira, J. Ferreira, Manbao and F. da Costa. Front row—Hugo Rosario, Frederico Nolasco, Amílcar Angelo and Fernando Aires.

M. WALLACE (H.K. Ladies). The best left half in the Colony. She is a keen tackler and should be a match for the Australian right flank.

H. KNILL (C.B.S.). Playing at right wing is a fast runner and keeps good control over the ball. She is inclined to go a little too far before centring. Would do well to work in instead of keeping close to the touchline.

J. DALZIEL (H.K. Ladies). Has shown great improvement recently. In quite a good forward but lacks a dangerous hit when in front of goal.

M. WOOLLEY (St. Andrew's). By far the best centre-forward. She is fast and is clever with her stick. Has been a prolific goal-getter for the Saints in past years. Should prove a real menace to the visitors' defence.

J. CHURCHILL (H.K. Ladies). A really good inside forward who has worked up a good understanding with M. Woolley. Also knows when to pass the ball out to her wing.

O. BROWN (Y.M.C.A.). The fastest player in the team. Knows how to control the ball and sends across some useful and well-placed centres. Will give the Australian wing half an anxious time.

THERE should be little difficulty in picking the winners of the Caer Clark Cup games this afternoon. The Macao "A" have a hundred per cent record to-date and that should be intact after their game with the C.B.A. The H.K. Ladies have an easy task being opposed to the C.B.S. while the "A" will still be at the bottom of the table after their game with the Saints.

I was pleased to see the C.B.S. come through with a couple of points on Saturday last. They are a sporting side and have taken the heavy beating since at the hands of the more experienced Clubs in good heart. Good luck to them in the future!

THIS afternoon the German Club meet the R.A.M.C. The latter Club have yet to win a point having lost all five tourney matches. There will not be much in the score either way.

TO-MORROW the Radio and Police play for Mamak points. Both sides have as yet been unbeaten in the tourney but I would favour the Radio for victory. They will not have an easy task, however, for the Police have got a fine combination this year.

THE other game for to-morrow is between the United and the 12th. Battery when the Battery will be at home. The United should pull off a win although they will have to make a better showing than they did against the German Club last week. The Signals and Anti-Aircraft Battery play on Monday. I would give a draw.

MACAO will be opposed to another Hongkong side on Sunday the Lincolns being their guests. Last week-end the home team pulled off a further win, defeating the Midway Officers. The Macao team must have a very useful eleven this year and will probably be seen in action here at Easter when it is proposed to invite them over for a triangular tournament with Hongkong and Shamoon.

THE pick of Monday's game will be that between the Punjabis and the R.A. Officers. The Indians have not yet struck their form but I have noted a decided improvement since they first took the field out here. They will probably go under again on Monday.

ON Tuesday the games to watch will be the H.K.S.R.A. versus the Lincolns and the Y.M.C.A. versus the East Lanes. The first named teams should win in each case.

A good clash on Wednesday will be that between the Radio and the H.K. Club 1st XI on the former's ground at Caroline Hill. I would not be surprised to see the Club beaten. At one time they were the undisputed champions of the Colony but with the increasing popularity of the game they have had to take a back seat.

ST. Andrew's and the C.B.A. meet in a friendly game on Thursday and I expect the latter to repeat their success of Sunday last.

THE Lincolns were badly let down by the Hongkong Club on Monday. A fixture had been arranged between the Club 2nd XI and the Lincolns, but when the soldiers arrived there were only three Club men there to oppose them—H.R.A. Wood, S. Hill and S. MacNider. At the last minute it appears they called in five men from the Argyls. A. A. Dand, who had turned up for the purpose of watching the game played in long trousers! This has been the experience on more than one occasion during recent seasons and if the Club cannot fulfil their obligations they had better scrap their second team.

Benares, Jan. 12.

The Vizianagram eleven defeated the Marylebone Cricket Club tourists here in a two-day match, which was completed to-day, by fourteen runs.

The Vizianagram eleven scored 124 and 140 in their first and second innings respectively, and the M.C.C. scored 111 and 159.

Jardine was the top-scorer in to-day's innings, adding 36 to the team's total.

This was the first defeat of the present tour that the M.C.C. has suffered. In fact, it is the first reverse since the tour of the team captained by A. E. R. Gilligan in 1926.—Reuter.

KOWLOON HOCKEY

PUNJABIS BEAT EAST LANCES ON MARINA

The Punjabis first team entertained the East Lances on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon and won by four goals to nil.

At the interval the Punjabis led by one goal to nil, the scorer being Mohamed Asfar. Although the East Lances had their fair share of the game they were unable to find the net. In the second half the home side played much better but their forwards missed several chances in front of goal. During this period Mohamed Asfar scored another and Wahait Shah scored twice.

The Indians were without the services of Dulia Singh, at centre-half, his place being taken by Capt. Walton. Their forward line showed a great improvement.

RADIO BEATEN.

The H.K.S.R.A., who were on the list to play the S.W.F. played a match with the Radio, the Hongkongs being unable to come in from camp. The game was fast and was won by the H.K.S.R.A. by two goals to one. Dos Mohamed and Lieut. Garthwaite scored for the military side in the first half, Kalwant Singh replying for the Radio after the interval.

CLUB "A" v. LOWER DECK.

The Fleet Lower Deck hockey XI were defeated by the Hongkong Hockey Club "A" team at King's Park yesterday by the odd goal in three. The deciding goal came from a penalty bully given against the services' custodian for kicking the ball. Senior shot both goals for the Club.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

Do you know, I believe it is less difficult to find good hands while here in my sickroom than while scouting around, all over the country, to various tournaments? Experts throughout the country, knowing that I have been laid up, have been sending me hands so that my daily article can carry on.

To-day I received an interesting bridge book from and by that well-known expert, Willard Karn. It is a new type of book, being in loose-leaf form, and the author is going to keep it up-to-date, with supplements every three months. It is well written and contains many interesting hands.

For example, it has the famous hand played by that great master, Waldemar von Zedtwitz.

♠ K 7 2	♥ 8 7 5 4	♦ 10 6 4 3	♣ 10 6 4 3
♠ A K Q 8	♥ A J 10 6 3	♦ A J 10 6 3	♣ A J 10 6 3
♠ J 9 6	♥ 4 3 2	♦ 4 3 2	♣ 4 3 2
♠ 10 8 5 2	♥ 10 8 5 2	♦ 10 8 5 2	♣ 10 8 5 2
♠ 10 7 4	♥ 10 7 4	♦ 10 7 4	♣ 10 7 4

Duplicate—None Vul.
Opening Lead—9.

South	West	North	East
1♥	Pass	2♠	Pass
2♥	Pass	3♥	Pass
4♥	Pass	5♥	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Re-bid	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding is according to Mr. Karn's book.

The Play

West's opening lead was the nine of spades, which Mr. von Zedtwitz, declarer in the South, won with the ace. He realized that West's double must be based entirely on the king, queen, and x of hearts, as North and South had every other ace, king, and queen.

He realized that his only hope of making the hand was to strip West of spades, diamonds, and clubs. This he proceeded to do, even to ruffing good cards of both suits.

South finally bore his hand down to the ace, jack, and ten of hearts, while dummy was down to the nine, eight, and seven of hearts. A small heart was led, which West was forced to win with the queen. West now had to lead away from his king and the deuce of hearts into declarer's ace and ten. Thus the small slam contract was made.

Today's Contract Problem

How should North and South bid this hand to arrive at a contract of six clubs? And then, with a heart opening, how should the declarer play the hand to make it?
